Positive '06 Results for Insurance and Ministries

MAX (MutualAid eXchange), in just its sixth year of providing a wide-range of insurance and mutual aid products and ministries to Anabaptists across North America, had outstanding results in 2006. The insurance operations side of MAX (United States and Canada) enjoyed positive results with net income of over two million dollars.

But the financial results weren't the only positive outcome for MAX last year. Countless hours of volunteer help, several hundred thousand dollars and other support were given through the MAX Mutual Aid Ministries (MAM) program to support Anabaptists in need, from hurricanes Katrina and Rita, to health and financial issues.

MAX Mutual Aid Ministries (MAM) works hand in hand with the insurance side of MAX at many different levels. The support given to MAM activities is a direct result from the financial component of the insurance company. Funds are invested to go back to the members and help them, their congregations and their communities in times of need. Jim Gascho, MAX Vice-President of Sales says, "The insurance products plus mutual aid ministries sets MAX apart from other insurance companies. Preserving and restoring wholeness is more than a slogan. It is the passion which energizes as we bring wholeness to the Anabaptist community."
